THE SUCCESSOR OF WEBSTER.

The Curious Combination of Circumstances by Which His Re-Election was Secured.

Some Manipulations that Slightly Resemble Machine Work.

A Suspicion that the Terms of the Tgade with Crapo May Not be Carried Out, . .

Decause Butler's Aspirations and Some Other Things May Prevent.

BOSTON, Jan. 21.-Hou. George Frishie Hoar has been re-elected to the United States senate for the term beginning on the fourth of next March, the final ballot in the joint convention being Hear, 148; Bowerman, 88; Loug, 36, and Crapo, 3. The whole number of votes east on that ballot was 277, and 139 were necessary for a choice. It will be seen therefore that Mr. Hoar was reelected by a narrow margin of 9 votes. The fact that he ran so far behind his vote at the previous election, and in a state that has always been republican, and came very near defeat, might be construed as an intimation that the people want a change in the attitude of the senator but of what avail is a notice with six years to run? The real reason for the very decided falling off in the vote cast for Mr. Hoar was that the people demanded a change in the senator himself, and this they would have had if they had not been juggled out of it by the politicians. The people felt that Mr. Hoar belonged to a past geopie left that Mr. Hear belonged to a past generation, and that while he might represent what his followers are pleased to frequently refer to as," the better element" of the party, he did not represent the broarder and more liberal tendency of the times, which is making itself felt here as well as elsewhere. The republicans of Massachusetts were beginning to appreciate the situation of affairs as it was to appreciate the situation of affairs as it was forced upon them by the fall elections. They saw that it would not be politic to continue longer on a narrow gauge, and they knew that if the republican party was to be kept in power, even in Massachusetts, it must be liberalized, and the mea who have been prominently identified with the narrow proscriptive policy which has prevailed in the party councils in the max must give way to others who cils in the past must give way to others who have broarder instincts and are more in sym-

THE RANK AND FILE OF THE PARTY. THE BANK AND FILE OF THE PARTY.

The people of the state have never looked upon Mr. Hoar as one of their leaders, and never will, and had the choice of a United States senator been left to them his term would have expired next March. The politicians who have worked so assiduously in his behalf know this, and the people know that these men, under the leadership of ex-Collector Beard, have combined to nullify the popular will as it was expressed at the full elections. If those elections meant anything they meant that Mr. Hoar should not be re-elected. Many learislators were distinctly instructed to you legislators were distinctly instructed to vote against him, and complied with those instructions by going into the convention and then voting first, last, and always for Mr. Hoar. There is one word that expresses their action, There is one word that expresses their action, and that word is treachery. About the basest thing a man can do. Other legislators were elected upon the distinct issue that Mr. Hoar was to be defeated, and knowing the issue they accepted the office, and then deliberately went back upon their constituents. If there is any difference in the degree of treachery as exhibited by these two classes of legislators I cannot see it. The action of of legislators I cannot see it. The action of one is, to my mind, as bad as that of the other. The fall elections meant, if they meant anything, that the time had come for a change in thing, that the time had come for a change in the unmagement of the republican party in this state. Legislators had been instructed to vote against Mr. Hoar, and the issue was brought into the caucuses with a result that indicated that he could not be re-elected, and, more than all else, thousands of republicans who were opposed to the policy pursued by Mr. Hoar and his supporters, had gone over to the democratic standard in order to em-but with little effect, since Mr. Hoar will continue to represent the state in spite of their protest. The contest, which has just been brought to a close, was a somewhat remarkable one. The senatorial chair was occupied by a gentleman of unquestioned ability, of undoubted integrity, and of acknowledged scholarship and familiarity with public affairs, but he was opposed by a large portion of his party in the first place, because of his narrow prejudices and quarrelsome disposition, and principally because he stood at the head of an intolerant clique which has aiready ruled the party too long. Pitted against him in this contest were two of the most able and popular leaders of the party, and though both were far more acceptable to and though both were far more acceptable to the party rank and file, neither secured the place, and both are thought to have injured their chances for future preferment. Now that the smoke of the contest has partially cleared away, it may not be uninteresting to review the causes that have resulted in the re-election of Mr. Hoar. There was a very general impression among the old line re-publicans that the defeat of Mr. Hoar was the most cherished desire of Gov. Butler, and that as this was his desire the interests of republican party could best be served by the re-election of Mr. Hoar, who has always stood as the exponent of the anti-Butler sentiment of the republican party. The old line is largely made up of country members, who saw in this contest a chance to rebuke the Butler sentiment, which has always been strong in the large cities, and so the feeling of opposition between the cities and the country made itself felt early in the canvass. In carrying out their design

TO REBUKE THE BUTLERISM OF THE CITIES old liners overlooked the result of the fall elections. They are not at all in doubt upon that point now, for they are getting highly important information in the form of pretty plain expressions of opinion from their "deestricts," where the opinion seems to prevail that some of the men who voted for Mr. Hoar sold their constituents out. The point that Butler must be rebuked and that this could best be done by the re-election of Mr. could best be done by the re-election of Mr. Hoar was first brought out by some of the bright young journalists on the Hoar side, and was at once appreciated by the Hoar leaders, who, with all their adrattness and cunning, brought it to bear upon the country members. By this argument they were forced into the Hoar ranks in spite of their own convictions that another coarse was advisable, and some of them in spite of pledges to their constituents, and by this argument they were held there until the final ballot was taken, and Mr. Hoar was declared elected. The crack of the pafty whip was heard long before the convention was held, and to its energetic use party whip was heard long before the convention was held, and to its energetic use is due the fact that Mr. Hosr, with a large portion of his party dead against him, went into the convention with a lead that made combinations impossible at the start, while it showed that his grip could not be broken except by a combination of fortations circumstances not likely to occur, and that even then he could not be defeated except by the most careful management. In a convention then he could not be defeated except by the most careful management. In a convention of 276 member, 139 necessary for a choice, Mr. Hoar began with 129 votes; while the opposition was divided between Mr. Howerman with 90, Mr. Long with 41, Mr. Crapo with 12 and 3 scattering votes. In order to defeat Mr. Hoar under these circumstances, it would be necessary to combine the strengh of ALL THE OPPOSITION CANDIDATES.

ALL THE OPPOSITION CANDIDATES.
If the Bowerman vote had been thrown for Mr. Long he would have had 131 votes. Salars of the required number. If it had been thrown for Mr. Craps he would have had 131 votes. Salars of the required number. If it had been thrown for Mr. Craps he would have had 105, and would have been 57 votes short of the required number. But if the entire opposition of the required number. But if the entire opposition could have been 57 votes short of the required number. But if the entire opposition could have been concentrated upon Mr. Long or upon Mr. Craps it would have amounted to 151, and would have exerted the election, with another two control of the field and it was still halled. It was unfortunate that there were two control of the field and it was still to compet the every committee yesterstay in favor of the bill to compet the strongth to the achier, which can and rive his strongth to the achier, the amportune of Mr. Craps gone over Mr. Long gone over Mr. Long to Mr. Crapo, the Bowerman vote would have been thrown solidly for the candidate remaining in the field, and his election would have been certain. But the opposition to Mr. Hoar was not only divided, it was disorganized, and this was one of its principal elements of weakness. The Long men were ably led and so were the Crapo men, the latter perhaps a little too ably. They were certainly led into the Hoar camp by the ex-attorney general. While the interests of the opposition candidates were well looked after, there was no leadership for the movement in which the people were most interested—i.e., the defeat of Mr. Hoar. The half-bearted manner in which Messrs. Long and Crapo entered the canvass was another element of weakness, and injured their chances from the start, for the timid legislators who had gone back on their pledges did not to Mr. Crapo, the Bowerman vote would

DARE TO DEFY THE PARTY WHIP. DARE TO DEFY THE PARTY WHIP.

In order to vote for men who were themselves in favor of the re-election of Mr. Hoar and were liable to pull out at any time. Having made one mistake they could not well afford to make another, and so they stuck to the Hoar column to the end. In behalf of Mr. Long it might be said that the position he took was that the office should seek the man, and not the man the office. His name was brought forward by his friends and he had the pluck to allow it to remain there. Whatever pluck to allow it to remain there. Whatever else may be said, John D. Long didn't go back on his friends. His canvass was not carried on in New Bedford. Again, the opposition was weak because of treachery on the part of members who solemnly pledged their support to the opposition control to the opposition of the control port to the opposition candidates and then failed to show up on that side when the time came to vote. Some of these men were thus doubly pledged, but pledges seemed to be of very little account when the crack of the whip was heard. The democrats did not make the roost of an exception to the contract of the contract o democrats did not make the nost of an ex-ceedingly unfavorable situation. The final vote was taken Thursday noon. Had they thrown their strength for Crapo on Wednes-day they night have secured enough of the Long vote to have elected Crapo that day, and Long vote to have elected Crapo that day, and they certainly would have prevented the combinations that were made that night, and resulted in the re-election of Mr. Hoar on the following day. The Long men would have been quite as likely to go to Crapo as to Hoar, and Crapo, re-enforced by Bowerman, would have had strength enough to attract most of them. This would have stampeded the Hoar men, and the result would have been much different from what it was. But what is the use of speculating? If the Crapo men had secured the whole, or a portion of the Long vote, George Marston would probably have turned that over to Hoar also—that is, if he could have done so. This brings me to the final and the real cause of Mr. Hoar's re-election, and that was tion, and that was

THE WEAKNESS OF MR. CHAPO HIMSELF. The weakness of Mr. Charo Himself.

He went into the field with every chance that could be expected in a three-cornered fight. On Wednesday night he held the key to the position, and had he remained firm and stood by his friends, he would have been the next United States senator from this state. You don't have to go to New Bedford for that information. You can see that at the state house. But about that time the Hoar mamagers, who had paid but little attention to the gers, who had paid but little attention to the Crapo movement, began to appreciate its importance, and telegrams were sent here and there, and the Boston merchants had a meeting and resolved that the best interests of the ing and resolved that the best interests of the state demanded the return of Senstor Hoar. Then the screws were put on to Mr. Crapo and he weakened, and telegraphed to ex-Collector Grinnell, of New Bedford, to telegraph to State Senstor Randall to go over to Hoar and to tell the Crapo men to do so. It matters little whether the dispatch that was received by Santar Randall come diseate, from Mr. by Senator Randall came directly from Mr. Crapo, the fact remains and it is not denied Crapo, the fact remains and it is not denied that a dispatch of this tenor was sent, and that is was this dispatch that caused the Crapo men to go over to Mr. Hear is undeniable The action of Mr. Crapo is sharply criticised here, and that those men who supported him in good faith are bitterly disappointed is plainly evident by their remarks, to the effect that when they take up another man they will find out what stuff he is made out of and what sort of friends he has before they stand him unbefore George. he has before they stand him up before George F. Hoar. In the meantime, it is said that the consideration offered to Mr. Crapo for his withdrawal was the support of the Hoar men in the gubernatecial contest next fall. It rephasise

THEIR HOSTILITY TO MR. HOAR.

This they did in a most startling manner, but with little effect, since Mr. Hoar will continue to represent the state in spite of the men who have been described by Mr. Crapo are fighters, and they will not willingly allow him to be elected governor by the Hoar

THEIR GODS

Under these circumstances. They cannot cleet Mr. Crapo without a spirited contest, for the men who have been described by Mr. Crapo are fighters, and they will not willingly allow principles to his widow, children or parents. All leaders. The fact that Gen. Butler is now in the gubernatorial chair may have some inthe gubernatorial chair may have some in-fluence upon the decision in this case, and it will be apt to have an influence upon the result, be it what it may.

Now, one word in regard to the outlook for the future. To those men who have always desired to see Massachusetts at the right of the republican column and have been largely guided by the sentiments expressed by the republicans in convention assembled, but who have seen the party dwindle from a majority of many thousands to nothing under the leadership of Mr. Hoar the prospect is not particularly encouraging. Gen. Butler is now in the gubernatorial chair, and, morenow in the guneranterial chair, and, more-over, has an ambition for the presidency. He has a large personal following in the republi-can party already, and by every legitimate means he will very naturally seek to increasu it. It will not be his fault if he does not succeed in holding all the strength he already has not if he were before the result new to has, and if he goes before the people next fail it will be found that he has received large accessions from the republican ranks, and he will be re-elected by a larger majority than he has just received. The demograts will naturally support him, and there will be still more defections from the republican party where the breach has been widened by the re-election of Mr. Honr. In addition to this he will receive a large float-ing vote, which is always ready to go over to the side that has the best chance, over to the side that has the best chance, for in politics, as in everything else, there is nothing so successful as success. I see that some of the papers are disposed to laugh at Gen. Butlar's aspirations for the presidency. This is all very well, and the general himself would not interfere with their fun if he could; but they laugh best who laugh last, and he has his little joke now on the gubernutorial seat. His effort to secure the seat he now holds seat. His effort to secure the seat he now holds has been a stock joke in the newspaper offices all over the country for the last quarter of a all over the country for the last quarter of a century, but the effort was successful nevertheless, and the men who were disposed to laugh at the pertinaceous general then are disposed to let his presidential aspirations alone. Gen. Butler has what we Ynnkees call sticktofffiveness, a quality that was never better exemplified than in his continuous canvass for the gubernatorial scat. Jaspen,

EPISODES AND EPIGRAMS.

A Tiff Hetween Mr. Hiscock and Mr. Atkins-Page as a Chairman-Helford's Bon Mot.

Mr. Hiscock and Mr. Atkins had a little disagreement on the floor of the house yester-day, which afforded an episode in the regular grind on the navy appropriation bill. Mr. Hiscock was saying that the committee had not designated which of two boards should have charge of the work of building the new ships, when Mr. Atkins, of the committee, said it was definitely stated in the bill. said it was definitely stated in the bill. Mr. Hiscock mildly dealed, and Mr. Atkins stated that Mr. Hiscock didn't knew what he was talking about, and the spirit of controversy was thoroughly aroused by this time, and the members pricked up their ears as the "you dids" and "I didn'ts" flew back and forth from one to the other. Both were about as near to being mad as members of the appropriation committee can set when Mr. appropriation committee can get, when Mr. Page pounded them into parliamentary shape, and the navy bill once more rode at anchor in smooth water. A few minutes later the member from New York might have been seen walking thoughtfully down among the democratic seats and pausing by the side of Mr. Atkin's desk. He explained, and Mr. Atkins wouldn't have it: then he explained some more, and Mr. Atkins wouldn't have it some more then Mr. Hiscock protested, and Mr. Atkins shook his head, but finally harmony was restored. Tennessee always gets builling mad at New Jersey and New York when the navy bill is up, but Tennessee fires with a double-barreled gun, hair trigger, and Mr. Chairman Page has nearly worn out his mallet-arm in keeping the elements down. Dr. Mehaffey remarked yesterday, while sitting in the door of the cloak-room: "Well, Page makes the very best of chairmen for this sort of sustained struggling." It will all be over today, and the other states, will have wi appropriation committee can get, when Mr. sort of sustained struggling." It will all be over to-day, and the other states will have a chance. The states that have "hundreds of square miles without water enough to freshen a mackerel," as Mr. Belford says, are as much interested in the tariff as they are in the
